Bacon top spender in E.C.

By CATHERINE SCHUTZ

EL CERRITO — Challengers Bob Bacon and Gregg Howe have collected and spent the most money in their race for seats on the City Council Nov. 8.

In his current campaign disclosure statement, Bacon, an El Cerrito Plaza merchant, reports collections of $6,154 and expenses of $2,958.

Next in line is Gregg Howe, who runs a local computer systems company, with reported contributions of $3,754 and expenses of $2,276.

Bacon, incumbent James Allen and Charles R. Lewis IV are running for two four-year seats on the council. Howe and challenger Steve G. Kirby are running for the two-year seat.

Lewis, a financial analyst, is not far behind in collections, reporting $2,638 including a $250 personal loan and $116 in non-monetary contributions. He lists expenses of $1,836.

Allen, an attorney for the Port of Oakland, reports contributions of $910 and expenditures of $1, 929. His contributions include a $350 personal loan.

Sixth-grade school teacher Kirby, who says he is running a non-traditional low-budget campaign, reports total contributions of $580 and expenses of $735.

Howe has reported the single biggest contribution so far, $957 from the El Cerrito Neighborhood Association, the group formed to oppose the senior housing project once proposed for Ashbury Avenue. Howe was active in that effort.

Both Howe and Bacon have reported a handful of contributions of $100 or more, but all the candidates are relying generally on smaller contributions that do not have to be disclosed individually.

Bacon has a $145 contribution from the city firefighters union, as well as $100 each from contractor Elmer J. Freethy, Eugene Agnitsch of the Silver Dollar Restaurant and Al Carter of the Silver Dollar Lounge, and $200 from Dr. Kevin Geraghty.

A look at the candidates

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — There will be three winners and two losers in El Cerrito's City Council election battle Nov. 8.

Competing for the two four-year terms are incumbent James Allen Jr.; and newcomers Robert Bacon, an El Cerrito Plaza merchant, and Charles "Chuck" Lewis, a financial analyst.

The two-year race, necessitated by the abrupt resignation of Richard Spellmann from the Council, matches Steve G. Kirby, an elementary school teacher, against Gregg Howe, owner of an El Cerrito computer firm.

Allen, 40, is an attorney for the Port of Oakland. A former mayor, he was elected to the Council in 1978 in his second attempt. Allen has a B.A. from UC-Berkeley and graduated from Hastings Law School in San Francisco. He served in the Peace Corps in the 1960s.

He said his main accomplishment as a Council member "has been to keep El Cerrito a special place despite large revenue loss and budget turmoil in Sacramento depriving El Cerrito of desperately needed funds."

Robert Bacon, 31, president of the Chamber of Commerce, owns Betty's Gifts, and the Hallmark Shop. He attended the College of San Mateo, and SF State University. Bacon is vice-chairman of the Planning Commission and a member of the Design Review Board.

Bacon said as president of the Chamber he "will provide the leadership needed on the Council to attract the quality commercial developments required to expand our tax base." He said the most important issue is "finding a Council that will cooperate among itself and with citizens."

The third candidate for the four-year seat, Chuck Lewis, 36, is a financial analyst for John Sanger Associates, urban planning consultants. Lewis has a B.A. from UC-Berkeley in government administration, and is the chairman of the El Cerrito Environmental Quality Committee.

Lewis was on the Planning Commission for five years, until he was recently removed from his post by the City Council. He emphasizes the need for crime prevention. "I am continuing my work with the Crime Prevention Committee, the Neighborhood Watch Program and the Home Security Inspection Patrol," he said.

A drainful of trouble

Albany's sewer system suffering from old age

By EILEEN WALSH

ALBANY — After 60 years as the unsung heroes of the city's public works system, Albany's sewers are beginning to rebel.

All over the city, lengths of clay sewer pipe are buckling, collapsing the streets above them; drains are backing up into houses; when the rains come, the sewers are too small to handle the overflow, and untreated sewage flows through the streets.

The problem is the same all over the East Bay, and a recent study indicates that the cost to repair years of neglect in East Bay Municipal Utilities District 1, to which Albany belongs, may exceed one billion dollars over the next 20 years.

"It's part of the collapse of the public works infrastructure all over the country," said Robert Guletz, Albany's director of public works. "Sewers are not glamorous (and) focusing attention on them was not in vogue. Over the years, officials in control of the funds did not recognize the needs."

Albany officials first began to see the need in 1981, Guletz said, and they initiated a $1 per month sewer service charge on residents' water bills to build up a fund to maintain and repair city sewers. That fee will jump to $2.50 this month because of rapid increases in sewer failures.

"The system has failed so much that the number of failures is no longer even related to the amount of rain we get," he said. "We get sewers collapsing now in the middle of summer."

Albany's problems stem from the fact that its 33 miles of public sewers and most of the private sewers were built in the 1920s, and the useful life of clay pipe sewers is generally 60 years, Guletz said. The problems fall into four general categories.

When the main city-owned pipes collapse, the streets above them buckle. Many of those that don't collapse are cracked or broken, which causes clogged drains. In individual homes, roots have overgrown and plugged backyard drains. Worst of all, during winter rains, the flow in Albany

Kensington eyes funding loss, possible cutbacks

By JIM GRODNIK

KENSINGTON — The police and fire departments have enough money for fiscal year 1983-1984, but next year may be a different story.

Last month, the district received augmentation money from Contra Costa County. The funds have been set up to aid districts since the passage of Proposition 13.

For both the police department, which is included in the Community Services District, and the Fire District, the money is not enough.

Police Chief Jack Christian said, "There will be no change in services, but that could result next year unless we increase our special tax."

Kensington voters have passed special taxes to fund both the police and fire departments.

The total budget for the Community Service district, not including salary increases, is $571,382. It is financed by the county funds, which this year total $271,729; property taxes, $138,221, and the special tax, $111,

970. Christian said other revenues come from service fees for fingerprinting, traffic accident reports and dividends on unused insurance, which could bring another $10,000 to $30,000.

He said county aid has been decreasing yearly. Increases were once 10 percent a year. The last one was 2 percent more than last year's, not enough to meet increased costs.

Salary negotiations for the department's 10 officers, which have been postponed until both sides knew how much county money was in the pot, are now underway.

Christian said most county settlements are for raises of approximately 4 percent and he expects the Kensington settlement to be around that figure.

Contracts between police and the district expired in June, and Christian said he would prefer this contract to be for 18 months, so that future one-year contracts will be from January to January.

Albany teachers sign pact

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — A settlement in teacher contract talks was reached late last week with the district yielding to the teachers' union on two of three outstanding issues.

After nine negotiating sessions spanning nearly five months, negotiators agreed to a five percent salary increase for Albany teachers, an eight percent increase for Children's Center employees and a school calendar for next year.

The agreement came three days after more than 200 teachers and parents jammed the school board's meeting room Oct. 25 in an action intended to demonstrate teacher and community unity.

"I think we have a good contract in Albany," said Bill Savage, the Albany Teachers Association's president, in an interview Monday. "I think the teachers are reasonably happy."

The ATA met Friday afternoon minutes after negotiators completed their talks. With only one dissenting vote, teachers voted to accept the revised contract for the 1983-84 academic year.

"I'm delighted that we were able to come to a fruitful settlement," school board president Robert L. Nehls said. "Now we can get back to the business of educating kids."

Nehls and superintendent Stephen A. Goldstone expect the board to ratify the contract at its next meeting Nov. 8.

The five percent raise, which could mean between $1,000 and $1,500 annually for the average Albany teacher, is a full percentage point above the district's previous offer.

Teachers had requested either a six percent raise or five percent with a contingency plan providing that a portion of anticipated additional income go to teachers.

During negotiations school officials said that salaries in Albany were at the median of all teacher wages in Alameda County, with a starting level of $12,108 for first-year instructors with a bachelor's degree.

But a high school biology teacher at the last board meeting, Gene Davis, asserted that being at the median of the pay scale was not enough. "We are excellent," he said, "we deserve excellent pay."

According to Goldstone, the district will have to come up with an additional $87,000 to fund the increases if other employee groups win the same increase as teachers, as they traditionally have. Some of the shortfall may be made up by extra state support, since enrollment at Albany schools is larger than anticipated.

The ATA also won an additional three percent increase for children's center salaries to begin to equalize teacher wages throughout the district. Though working a shorter work day than other district teachers, beginning children's center teachers with a bachelor's degree were making only $8,328 annually.

"No other employees working at the children's center are compensated less than their counterparts at other sites in the district," said children's center teacher Charlene Federico in a prepared statement to the board.

"It is time to speak to the inequities in this district," she said. "Teachers hold credentials, background and experience equivalent to every other teacher in the district."

"If the board and the members of this community feel

Driving is a pleasure when you own a Model A

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — The Greatbanks family on Junction Drive is a model family. Model A.

Les Greatbanks, 48, keeps his pride and joy, a 1930 Model A Ford sedan in the garage. On the wall is a sign, "The only difference between men and boys is the price of their toys."

A neighbor across the street houses Greatbanks' 1928 Model A. The passion for vintage Fords must be hereditary. Greatbanks' son, Scott, owns a 1931 Model A pickup, which is garaged by another cooperative neighbor.

Inside the house, coffee-table coasters are decorated with pictures of old Fords. Over the mantle is a large watercolor painting of the sedan and the coupe. A pillow draped on the stereo is embroidered with the likeness of an antique Ford. In the hall, pictures of the cars are interspersed with family pictures.

Greatbanks drives his cars regularly, around town and on the freeway.

He and other members of the Diablo A's, a group of Model A enthusiasts, go in caravans on monthly excursions. They drive for weddings and appear at car shows and center promotions. A procession of club members in Model A's opened the Antioch Bridge.

Greatbanks has been fascinated with the Model A since he bought his first one in the mid 50s for $25. He sold it after for $50, but ever since he longed for another.

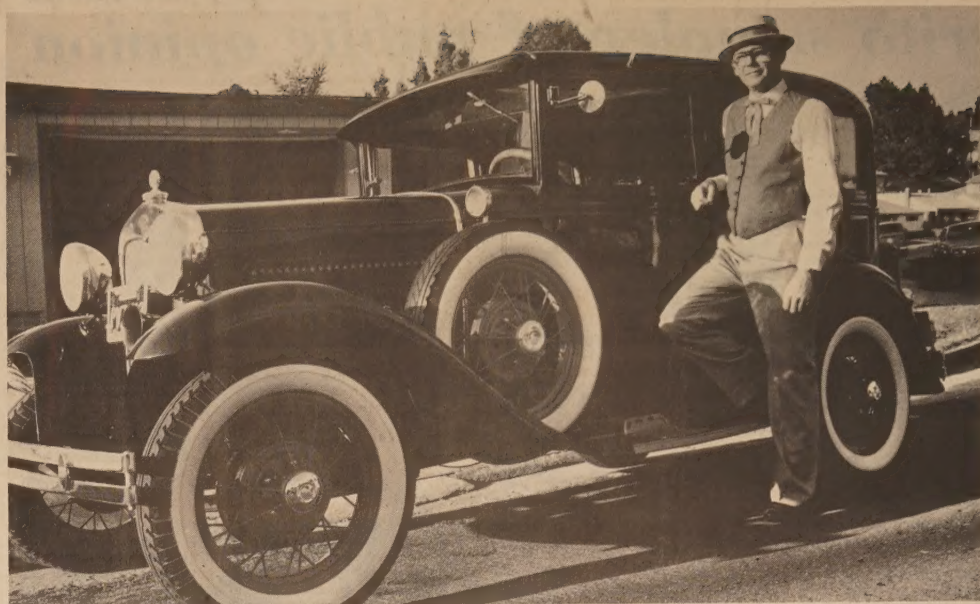

"They're easy to work on, fun to drive, and they attract attention," said Greatbanks. And his cars are no house flowers.

Some owners take their cars out only for shows. That's not my idea of a fun car," Greatbanks said. "I take them out every weekend. I don't care if it's raining." He's driven the car 10,000 miles since owning it, but doesn't know its total mileage.

Last summer, Greatbanks and his wife, Beth, drove a Model A to a Model A convention in Calgary, Alberta. The trip, which was with eight other Bay Area Model A owners, covered 3,500 miles.

The cars, equipped with CB radios and spare parts, traveled between 45 and 50 miles an hour. The only problem Greatbanks had on the entire journey was a 15 minute delay to replace a carburetor.

In 1980, at a convention in Reno, his was one of 639

Model A's from all over the country assembled in the parking lot of the MGM Grand hotel.

Greatbanks is soft-spoken and reserved out of his car, but he enjoys the attention the sedan attracts on the street. It has the stock "oooh-ga" horn, and he's added a train whistle for good measure.

He once drove Bay Municipal Court Judge Sam Mesnick in a campaign parade. "He was yanking on the train whistle just like a kid," Greatbanks recalled.

The car, which gets between 18 and 20 miles to the gallon, invariably attracts photographers. Pedestrians pull out cameras and start snapping. Greatbanks once had a driver point a long lens at him like a gun from the fast lane of the freeway, shooting from behind, from the side, and in the rear view mirror as the car pulled away.

"I wonder how those pictures come out," Greatbanks said.

He said the sedan could sell for about $8,000. "People think they cost a lot more."

Club members receive about $30 per car for chauffeuring wedding parties or appearing in parades and promotions. The address is The Diablo A's, p.o. box 6125, Concord, 95524.

Behind the wheel of his Model A, Les Greatbanks is ready to hit the road.

Barr is ready to take a dive

By DEBORAH BRANSCUM

ALBANY — Scot Barr wants to work where it is "cold, wet and miserable." Barr, 29, recently graduated from a commercial deep sea diving school in Oakland.

The course he took required a fulltime commitment from his students for nearly three months, time spent in the classroom and 35 feet underwater in the Oakland Estuary.

A former marine machinist, Barr leaned to scuba dive about 12 years ago. He enjoyed that, and friends at the shipyards where he worked told him about the Coastal School of Deep Sea Diving. He took the plunge into a new career by enrolling, and said he wants to work with salvage operations as a diver.

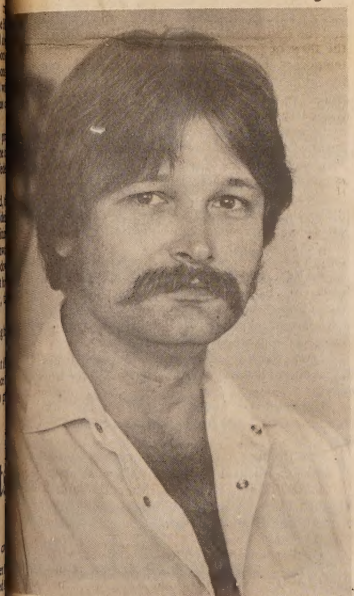

Poor visibility and cold water are problems for all commercial divers, according to Barr, who said deep sea divers routinely work several hundred feet underwater. Of all the types of diving, Barr said salvage work is the most difficult.

"Salvage work is the biggest challenge for a diver," Barr said. "It requires the most ingenuity in the least amount of time. When ships sink or run aground it's often because of bad weather conditions, and those conditions usually haven't abated when the divers start working."

Despite the difficulties, Barr said he would feel good about accomplishing his work under challenging conditions, and added that the pay is good.

"I'm adventurous and greedy," he said with a smile.

Barr said he plans to look for work in the Bay Area and possibly Mexico.

Business Bureau has advice for writers

Bill Wansley, president of the East and North Bay Better Business Bureaus, has advice for authors regarding publishers including "vanity" publishers of books, poems and directories.

Some authors submit their work to a vanity publisher if a traditional publisher has declined to accept the work.

Vanity or subsidy publishers, ask that publishing costs be paid in advance. The risk to the publisher is nominal; the author stands to lose money if the work does not sell.

For a reliability report on any publisher, call the BBB at 839-5900, which serves Alameda, Contra Costa, Napa and Solano Counties.

"Even if it's an out-of-state publisher, we'll be able to get that report to you," Wansley said.

Local family sends news from Vienna

ALBANY — Dr. Caj Falcke, his wife Liisa and daughters Gigi and Tania, who live on Peralta Avenue, are half way through a two-year tour of duty with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization in Vienna, Austria.

Gigi and Tania Falcke are both students at the American International School in Vienna. Gigi maintains an "A" average in her studies in Vienna, as she did at Albany Middle School.

She received an outstanding performance for her role in the play "People vs. Maxine Lowe."

She also performed in Albany Middle School's presentation of "Annie."

Liisa Falcke, assistant to the director of culinary arts at Merritt College, is researching Viennese cooking during her stay in Austria.

Dr. Falcke's duties have led him to Sweden, Finland, Central Europe, Italy and Kenya.

El Cerrito sampler of public opinion

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — El Cerrito voters are not burning with enthusiasm over any single issue or City Council candidate, if an opinion sample in El Cerrito Plaza is any indication.

Last week, when asked about the Nov. 8 election, most voters said they hadn't done their homework yet. They'll make their decision close to election day.

All were asked what local issues they considered most important; how they decided on a candidate; which candidates they were familiar with; and what, if anything, El Cerrito should do to attract new businesses.

Except for the common theme of enlarging and improving El Cerrito Plaza, there was a wide range of "they ought to's." Most had only a sporadic knowledge of the candidates.

In next week's City Council election, James Allen Jr., Charles Lewis and Robert Bacon are competing for the two four-year terms. Gregg Howe and Steve Kirby are matched in the two-year race.

Margaret Mason, 75, who has raised six children, said she worries about increased taxes. "We are living in our own home, and we can do that as long as taxes are kept down."

Neighborhood issues top Mason's priorities. "We like having trees kept in order. We want people to keep their trees pruned." She also favors an ordinance outlawing loud motorcycles.

Mason had just returned from a meeting where two of the candidates addressed a group of senior citizens. "One was Allen. I can't remember who the other one was," she said.

Walter Faria, 38, a photographer, was also unfamiliar with the candidates. "Bob Bacon is the only one I know," he said.

"I usually vote for liberals or progressives," he said. "I'd vote for a conservative if he had special qualities and integrity. I don't pay too much attention to local politics."

Faria said, "I'd like to see more bike paths." As for new business, he said, "I wouldn't want any sort of big industry moving in and I wouldn't want to see any high-rises here." Faria suggested covering or enlarging the Plaza to attract business.

Retired pipefitter Robert Piantanida, 67, who has lived in the same house for 40 years, couldn't name any of the candidates. Issues? "I haven't been paying much attention. Homes for the aged are important."

New business? "Well, they don't seem to want factories. They could enlarge the shopping center. A Gemco would be a good idea," he said.

Margaret Wakeman, 18, who works for a market research company, will be voting for the first time in the Council election. She is concerned about crime and wants a candidate who will clean up the streets, and who cares about the city.

"They should re-do the Plaza to make the city more attractive. Hilltop Mall is growing like crazy," she said. "They should make the Plaza indoors and add new stores, more buildings."

She hasn't decided on candidates. "Bacon is supposed to be good."

Betty McCarthy, housewife and little-theater director, likes things the way they are. Her preferred candidate? "Somebody who's not going to turn everything into a shopping mall or a parking lot."

"I've heard of Gregg Howe, Bob Bacon and Chuck Lewis, but I'm not going to vote for him," she said. "They should keep business on San Pablo Avenue and in the Plaza. I'm conservative like all the other old duffers."

Jeani Holder, 23, agrees on a policy of slow growth. Holder, a clerk at Mainly Seconds, couldn't name any of the candidates. "I'll probably make a hasty last-minute decision," she said.

Holder is a renter and favors rent control. She would like to see new businesses if the city needs revenue. "El Cerrito seems like a sleepy suburban area, it would be nice to leave it that way," she said. "It's surrounded by large cities."

The strongest pro-development attitude came from Tony Delorefice, 63, a contractor and building inspector. "They should attract all the business they can. It's a source of revenue," he said. "Sometimes they (the planning commission) get carried away with authority."

"Lots of little petty things have been going on for years. Contractors lose more trying to fight it (regulations) than it's worth."

Delorefice identified candidates Lewis, Bacon and Howe. "Lewis is a good friend of a friend," he said. Word of mouth determines whom he votes for. "I try to talk to someone in the field they work in," he said.

Steve Kirby, 33, is a lifelong El Cerrito resident. He graduated from El Cerrito High in 1968, and has a B.A. and a teaching credential from UC-Berkeley. Kirby, who teaches at Castro Elementary School, is president of the Park and Recreation Commission and a delegate from the Richmond School District to the National Education Association.

He supports the city's recycling project program. "There must remain an environmental responsibility the recycling of reusable resources, especially as a method for maintaining lower refuse rates and for extending the life of the landfill."

He also favors improvements in El Cerrito Plaza. "The Plaza has been losing out to Hilltop Mall and needs to be upgraded," he said.

Gregg Howe, 35, owns Trigon Systems Corporation, a five-member computer firm in El Cerrito. He grew up in Kensington and earned a B.S. in physics at Pomona College. He has been a member of the Board of Appeals since 1981.

Howe has questioned the city's spending development money to promote commercial development. "As a businessman," he said, "I am skeptical that this spending will succeed in raising tax revenues as planned. The community would benefit more if these funds were used for public projects of lasting value, such as street improvements, public facilities or senior housing."

He campaigned against the municipal services last year and said the Council should have the measure. "In the long run we must remember the voter's wishes," he said. "Planning our budget so we can live within our means without the special tax will be a necessary challenge."

Lord & Cantu lead funding in RUSD race

By DON McCORMACK

Incumbent Katherine Lord and running mate George Cantu are leading other candidates in raising money for the Richmond Unified School Board race.

According to financial reports filed with the Elections Department, the Lord and Cantu committee raised $7,316 in contributions, loans and non-cash contributions.

Lord, the only incumbent in the five-person race, in addition raised for herself $3,962.

By contrast, George Dabney said by telephone he has raised about $1,500. Ionia White and Michael Lewis have raised less than $500 and, therefore, are exempt from reporting requirements.

Both say they plan to spend more than $500 in the week before the Nov. 8 election. Two seats are open on the board, which sets policy for the Richmond Unified School District.

Among the major contributors to the Lord & Cantu committee are:

- $500. Public Employees, Local 1.
- 300. Gonzalez Mexican Restaurants.
- $200. Magdalena Cantu, American Mutual Protective Bureau, Rosemary Corbin (a quilt worth $1,000) LULAC Nutrition Program.
- $150. Mallory Tripp.

Power Co., Roger Hartman, Katherine Lord, Susan man, Dickinson-Warren Business College, Carol H. E.A. Goynne, Dwight Merrill, Richmond Community George Livingston, Mildred Washington.

Lord took out a $400 loan. The committee raised 923 in donations under $100. These do not have to be itemized.

Expenditures include $1,680 for the Galleries (fund-raiser); $1,604 for newspaper ads and $207 for age.

Contributors to the Lord committee included: • $200. Michael Perlstein, William Whiting. • $100. Edel Alejandre, Maurice Barusch, S. Beyerat, Michelle Brown, Norma Farley, former assemblyman John Knox, Richmond Councilman James Ian and Rita Corcoran.

Lord took out a $500 loan for this committee. Dabney mailed his report. It was not immediately available.

Financial summaries are due after the election.

String of pearls

Standard equipment: In Contra Costa County, drivers aren't allowed behind the wheel of a pickup truck that has a gun rack unless they're wearing a cap with a logo and Cat preferred. Volvo station wagons in Albany Berkeley come factory-equipped with a child in a car seat. VW buses aren't allowed on the street without bumper stickers. Is there an ordinance against the sale of BMWs to courteous drivers? ... The BMW Autozentrum in San Rafael is having a sale, believe it or not, an "Achtung Sale." Ve haff vays being tasteless.

Great idea: Senator Pete Wilson (R-Cal.) has introduced a Senate bill limiting the number of federal holidays. Each new holiday costs the taxpayer — that's us, $18 million in federal salaries alone, and waiting in line for recognition are Franklin Roosevelt, Thomas Jefferson, Jonas Salk, Albert Einstein, Jack Nicklaus and Willie Parker. Few legislators dare veto a holiday — anyone who voted against Martin Luther King Day risked being branded a racist. Let's honor our heroes with commemorative stamps, and by naming schools and football teams after them.

Speaking of stadiums: What better name for the sure-built domed stadium in San Francisco's China Basin ... "The Wok," which is, indeed, a China basin ... I see the promotions now. It's a year-round facility, so it'll be "Wok around the clock;" for science fiction "Grok the Wok;" from downtown, "Walk to the Wok;" ... not to mention Wok concerts. My own dome is stir-fried.

In El Cerrito Plaza, the mannequins in the window at Parks Ltd., are turned out in the most fashionable of footwear, but don't look down, the poor plastic ladies are foot. Sales clerk Tillie Friedkin said it wasn't always a Plaza shoe store, which shall remain nameless, lent to Parks (they don't sell them), but reclaimed them in a fashion show. Until the shoes are returned, the poor ladies can only stand and shiver. ... Also in the Plaza, if anything closer to heaven than the peach ice cream machines, I haven't found it.

Personalized plates: On San Pablo, a Pinto with a rear end danger — EXPLOSV; near the Del Norte Bart Station, SXY MXY ("Hispanic") has too many plates; on Ensenada Avenue in Thousand Oaks, a white Rabbit, ZE LAPIN — French for rabbit, but you know that; on Jackson Street in Albany, a white Camaro, CHUF; on Portland Avenue, a blue Dodge Van, CKPK; and finally — bet you thought this would never be in El Cerrito Plaza, a Blue Honda, DECORR. The one-great is the blue Plymouth Horizon with the plates, FOND. ... Maybe if I hum a few bars?

The wonderful world of commercials: The pitch of the makers used to be the car was a woman. Soft leather, long lines, colorful, shiny bumpers. Now they're selling violence. Check out the ad for the Chrysler Laser, created by James Earl Jones, the voice of Darth Vader. The car is black, the voice menacing, and the windows reflecting. There's no person in there. From the outside the car is just a presence. In the one quick shot of the driver, hidden behind a black mask. The message is: you can be powerful, threatening, "bad," and still have the protection of anonymity ... I pass.

Quotable: On Monday Night Football, Frank Gifford said "Tony Dorsett is a great runner despite the smallness of his size." By the way, I'm going to come out of the gate. I like Howard Cosell on Monday nights. He can be cutting, but he's got opinions on everything and he's a team man. Then there was El Cerrito Councilman James Jr., who is a lawyer, discussing appointments to the Planning Commission, "I don't think we should have too many attorneys. They tend to mess things up."

If you have any comments, news, witticism or criticism on this column it is welcome. Call Jim Grodnik, 525-2644, or write c/o Times Journal, 1247 Solano Ave., Albany 94706.

Teacher supporter

As a parent of two children attending Albany schools, I would like to express my support of Albany teachers. I feel that Albany schools have done an outstanding job, and that success stems primarily from the efforts of our teachers. Now is not the time to sell them short. Their current three proposals seem to be more than reasonable.

I strongly urge that the Albany Board of Education support and approve our teachers' proposals.

Sincerely,
Katherine Mello

Bookshelf

Looking at 70 years of lending books

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — Not many people would take a voluntary 20 percent pay cut to help save other people's jobs. El Cerrito's head librarian Grace MacNeill did.

When the Proposition 13 ax fell in 1979, MacNeill, who has a B.S. from UC-Davis and a graduate degree in library science, volunteered to work a 32-hour week. She had enough seniority to maintain a full work-week, but she took the cut, as did others in Contra Costa County. The result was eight to 12 jobs saved county-wide.

Explaining her dedication to the library system, MacNeill said, "A library is in touch with basic equality and democracy."

The shadow of Proposition 13 has darkened the library during hours it once was open; but with 45,000 volumes, a full-time reference service, a children's picture book hour, a public meeting room and heavy use by all ages, the library, which just celebrated its 70th birthday, is doing fine, according to MacNeill.

The first public library in El Cerrito opened in 1913 in the post office of Rust (the city's original name) with a collection of 130 books. In 1915, the library moved to the home of Fay Breneman, the original head librarian. The next stop 10 years later was a cottage on Fairmont Avenue.

The current building, enlarged and remodeled in 1960 with a $100,000 bond issue, has been the library's home since 1949.

MacNeill said the library's biggest biggest problem is books that go out and don't come back, because of theft or laziness. She objects to people who just don't get around to returning books.

The maximum fine on overdue books is only $2.50, 50 cents for children, and there's a night drop. "They don't even have to face us," she said.

Books that commonly disappear are the newest ones on business investment or best-sellers such as Jane Fonda's Workout book.

In 1925 the El Cerrito public library was in the home of head librarian Fay Breneman, at 10135 San Pablo Ave.

"It's so discouraging," MacNeill said. "It's very undemocratic. The value of a library is it represents true equality. Anybody can come in and get the same kind of help as anybody else. When books don't come back, it destroys that right."

A librarian needs a finger on the public pulse in deciding what books to order. Self-awareness is popular, MacNeill said, with the psychological approach giving way in popularity to the physical. The best-seller waiting list is longest now for James Michener's Poland, Judith Rossner's August, and The Color Purple by Alice Walker.

The budget for cassette tapes is small. "I wish we could do more of that, people want to hear them when they're driving," MacNeill said.

The El Cerrito library has a reference librarian on duty all the time. "If we don't have the answer here, we'll find out where to get it," she said. "Of course we try not to do homework on the phone."

Questions have ranged from someone asking if a leaf was marijuana, to a phone call asking why a certain mixture of chemicals hadn't exploded.

Library hours are Monday and Thursday from noon to 8 p.m.; Tuesday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Friday and Saturday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. The library is at 6510 Stockton Ave. For information, call 526-7512.

Local man faces rape rap

A Berkeley man has been arrested and charged with rape for an alleged attack that took place near UC married students' housing in Albany.

Albany and UC police arrested 27-year-old Johnnie George Bradley of Harrison Street after he allegedly raped a 33-year-old acquaintance in a remote area between University Village and the Southern Pacific railroad tracks in Albany.

Police say the woman, also a resident of Berkeley, had gone with Bradley to the area shortly before 6 p.m. Oct. 23 to walk her dog.

"She had some markings on her body that suggest that the attack probably was fairly violent," said Albany police Capt. Melvin Boyd.

The woman was taken to Herrick Hospital in Berkeley for treatment and released later Sunday night.

Bradley was arraigned in Berkeley-Albany Municipal Court Monday on rape charges and taken to the Santa Rita jail in lieu of $10,000 bail.

Getting down to business

New and noted

Everybody knows that sometimes you have to spend money to make money. Now entrepreneurs in El Cerrito will have a chance to borrow money to make money.

A workshop on low interest loans for small businesses will be held Nov. 3. The loans, aimed at creating jobs for low- and moderate-income workers, may be used only for commercial and industrial projects, including construction and purchase of land, buildings and equipment.

The loans are administered by Pacific Community Services and combine money from private lenders, the county and the Small Business Administration.

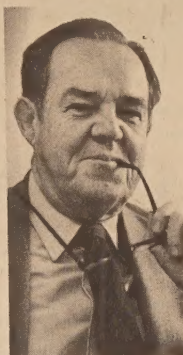

The Revolving Loan Program was started in 1982 by the county to serve businesses in parts of Crockett, El Cerrito, Montalvin Manor, North Richmond, Pinole, Rodeo and San Pablo.

Pacific Community Services will hold information sessions for business owners interested in the loan program starting at 8:30 a.m. in the City Council chambers, 10890 San Pablo Ave. To attend, phone 439-1056.

Seems David Viale of Kirby's is becoming addicted to do-gooding. Viale was responsible for donating a cold buffet for organizers of Albany's 75th anniversary hoopla. Now he's ready for the big time and is taking on Christmas.

With the assistance of Albany Fire Chief Mike Koepke and El Cerrito Fire Chief Pete Barraza, Viale is planning a benefit dinner for Wednesday, Dec. 7, at 7 p.m. Tickets for this Italian-style meal are $10, and the proceeds will be used to buy food, clothing and toys for needy kids.

Viale, who hopes to make this an annual event, hopes to raise $2,000 from ticket sales and raffle donations. Proceeds from the dinner will be supplemented by raffle donations. Early bird prize donors are Elizabeth Barajas of Shannon Fun Tours, who is donating an overnight trip to Reno for two, and Bob Bacon of Betty's Gifts. Other local merchants getting into the act include Kristen Nelson, owner of Big Cat Book Store, who is considering holding an art exhibit to raise funds for the project. Norm and Joan Balagno, owners of the Mallard Club and Erie's Solano Club, will assist with the prize tickets.

Talia Husan, regional manager of Contra Costa Children's Council, will accept the check and be responsible for the purchasing and distribution of all Christmas gifts.

"These families that we work with are in situations where they barely receive basic necessities to survive," Husan said. "It is unusual for a group of volunteers to seek out a non-profit agency to provide monies for everyday needs or special occasions."

Dinner tickets are available at the Albany Fire Department, El Cerrito Fire Department, both Albany and El Cerrito Chambers of Commerce and from Kirby's Restaurant.

Learning to reduce stress

The Open Forum accepts essays on topics of general or community interest. Send submissions of no more than 750 words — three typed, double-spaced pages — to Editor, Times Journal, 1247 Solano Ave., Albany 94706.

By JACQUELINE CRAWFORD

When talking about stress, we all seem to have a repertoire of awful moments. For example, a crucial report is lost just as an important deadline at work is approaching. We're about to leave on a long-awaited and much needed vacation, and the air controllers go on strike.

We are well-acquainted with the effects of a frustrating bureaucracy, a difficult boss, disappointing significant other, a competitive job atmosphere, noise pollution, etc. External stressors such as these are usually the simplest to identify and the hardest to control. However, we are often less aware of the internal stressors affecting us over which we may have potentially more control.

Internal stressors include our attitudes, beliefs and expectations. They vary from person to person, depending upon each individual's family background and educational experiences. Some of the most common beliefs which contribute to stress are:

I must do everything perfectly in order to feel worthwhile. I must be in control to feel safe and secure. If I say "no," I'll hurt people's feelings. I must be right in everything I do. If I make a mistake, I must berate myself. I must please everyone all of the time in order to be liked. Feelings are irrational and therefore should be discounted. The more things I do and the faster I do them the better person I am. An overbooked appointment schedule is a statement of my success.

Of course, the list is endless. I think most of us identify with some of these beliefs or can create our own list. If you are unaware of your troublesome attitudes, a good friend make a list for you. That might be interesting to do anyway!

What do we do about all this? Like anything else, solving our stressful inner voices requires work and discipline. The first step, of course, is to recognize the stress which may be adding to the experience of stress in our culture situation.

Secondly, we must understand the origins and development of this attitude. For example, is it something learned from our parents or culture that we now have a choice to modify or change? Is the attitude protecting vulnerability we are fearful to expose? Are we reacting to a problem with our boss in the same way we did to a bearing parent or teacher? Are we expecting a love as unreasonable as Dad?

Sorting out these attitudes and expectations can open our eyes to the reality of the situation. Some people do this by writing their thoughts and feelings on paper, talking with a good friend. Others find some quiet alone for self-reflection.

However, since we all have our blind spots, some skill, objectivity, and extra support a psychologist can provide may be necessary to help us explore the realm. Whatever the method used when we are always amazed how an experience changes when we are inducing attitude can be identified and adjusted.

And as we change, people's reactions to us change well, so that we often do have an opportunity to make our environment in a more positive way.

Naturally there is no one answer for all problems situations. However, exploring our attitudes is one technique of stress reduction that can help.

A licensed clinical social worker, Jacqueline Crawford of El Cerrito has a private practice in psychotherapy in Berkeley.

Pity the parsnip

While trying to think of something I don't care to eat (it was hard!), my thoughts went to vegetables which are often the least imaginative dish on the table.

From artichoke to zucchini, I was hard put to pinpoint a really unpopular vegetable in my house. Then it occurred to me that unfamiliar was a better description than unpopular.

Cultural or ethnic influences probably play the largest part in our personal cuisines. That's why I must admit that I never prepare parsnips. After all, who ever heard of Parsnips Cacciatore or perhaps Pasta Con Parsnips?

Whither the parsnip?

Food historian Waverly Root contends that "the origin of the parsnip is mysterious." He traces evidence of this carrot-shaped white root in neolithic lake settlements in Switzerland and England. However, he feels that it is northern Eurasian in origin.

At one point, parsnips were highly thought of in ancient Rome. The Germans and the Dutch dotted on them and sent them across the Atlantic with our Pilgrim fathers. There they were introduced to the Indians, who liked them enough to cultivate them. Americans have not developed the parsnip into any distinctive preparation, but New Englanders are fond of them as an accompaniment to salted fish.

Picking a perfect parsnip

A perfect parsnip should be sweet and nutty flavored. Unfortunately, many are pithy or woody. That's why it's important to choose small or medium-sized ones with firm, well-shaped roots. If they are at all shriveled, they will be fibrous or pithy.

Parsnips require cold weather to convert their high starch content into sugar. That's why they are at their best in winter months. As a staple food, replacing potatoes many times throughout history, parsnips offer a good source of calcium and a little vitamin A. Mainly, however, they are a hearty substitute for potatoes and are often boiled and mashed and served interchangeably with them. Parsnips are also a common and basic ingredient for stews or stock.

This "bleached carrot" can be sauteed, stir-fried, or steam-baked as well. It should be pared just before using or held in acidulated water to prevent discoloration. By cutting in julienne fashion, tough cores can be eliminated. Cutting uniformly, whether dicing, slicing or shredding, will assure even cooking.

Parsnips can be used in most any recipe calling for carrots. The addition of a pinch of sugar or honey heightens their naturally sweet flavor.

Tart flavors are also good seasoners for parsnips. For an interesting color and taste combination, saute similar sized slices of carrots and parsnips in butter and then add 1/4 cup water to the skillet with 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard and 1 to 2 tablespoons of Worcestershire sauce. Cover and cook five minutes or so until tender.

Other easy dishes

Cut peeled or scraped parsnips into shoestring pieces and boil in a minimum amount of salted water until tender. Then glaze in a skillet with equal parts of butter and honey and serve sprinkled with cinnamon.

Sometime substitute half the amount of honey with lemon juice and garnish with parsley.

For an interesting treatment, parsnips can be cooked in a small amount of boiling salted water, drained and processed coarsely. Add several eggs and a sprinkling of flour to make a firm mixture. Season with salt, pepper, parsley, and a dash of mace. Form into flat patties and fry in butter. I often do this with left-over potatoes. Parsnips make an interesting flavor variation.

Consider this old American recipe the next time you roast pork.

Creole parsnips

- 6 medium parsnips
- 1 1/2 t. salt
- 1/4 t. nutmeg (fresh grated is nice)
- 3 T. sugar
- 4 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1/2 c. chopped green pepper
- 4 T. butter
- 1/2 c. raisins

Cook parsnips in boiling salted water for 30 to 40 minutes until tender. Plunge into cold water, peel, and cut out any hard fibers at core. Mash until smooth, add seasonings and eggs.

Saute green pepper in butter and stir with the raisins into the mashed parsnips. Bake in a buttered casserole or in mounds right in the pan with the pork roast for about 15 minutes.

Playing games in Spanish class: (l.-r.) Jesse Quay, David Grossman, teacher Kevin Woodridge, Sarah Rothgery, Josh Jamal, Seth Zweben and Erin Cheasty

Teaching espanol to small fry

By BETH MENDE
BANY — If there's one thing kindergarten teacher Sarah Rothgery wants to learn how to say in Spanish, it's "dirty sock." She probably will learn it — along with "good morning," "see you later" and other basics of the language.
Rothgery is enrolled in the Spanish cultural language class offered through the Albany Parks & Recreation Department. Held at Cornell School, the classes meet for one hour each week, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and are open to children in grades K-5.
"More than anything, I want (these kids) to develop a positive attitude towards Spanish," said instructor Kevin Woodridge, a teacher for the Oakland schools.
Woodridge, 23, said that learning a language at a young age has certain advantages. "Kids have less inhibitions about speaking in another language (while) adults are more self-conscious," he said.
Making learning fun is part of the process, Woodridge said, and so he incorporates games, tapes, picture-drawing and story books into his lessons. Although instructions are generally given in English, 40 to 60 percent of what is spoken in class is in Spanish.
On Tuesdays, Woodridge teaches Spanish to kindergartners through second graders, many of whom have their own special reasons for studying the language.
Second grader Josh Jamal wants to learn Spanish so he can go to Mexico. He thought he could learn to speak fluently in "about a year."
Kindergartener David Grossman wants to know how to say "dog," since he has one at home. Second grader Jesse Quay said of the class, it's "just like it's fun."
"I want to teach my mom 'cause a lot of people speak Spanish around here," said Erin Cheasty, 5. Her mother, Valerie Mazza, said that her daughter plays her Spanish tapes every night at home. "You can't help but learn it when you keep hearing it," she said.
Mazza enrolled her daughter in the class because Cheasty has always been very interested in languages and has a friend her age who speaks the language.
"I think the teacher's excellent," said Mazza of Woodridge. "He has a very good understanding of children and handles any discipline problems very easily and incorporates them (into the class)."

Teaching such young children can be difficult, Woodridge admitted. One of his greatest challenges is in keeping their attention.
Towards that end, Woodridge tries to vary classroom activities and not remain on any one project for more than 15 minutes.
While Woodridge may be concerned about maintaining the interest of his students, students such as Sarah Rothgery should give him little to worry about.
"I want to learn Spanish really bad," she said. "I want to learn Spanish forever, until I grow up."

Classes are ongoing and cost $30 per month or $84 for three months. If more than one child from a family participates the fee is $15 per child. There is also a one-time registration fee of $10; $5 if more than one child is registering.

Schools

RUSD mulls year-round classes

By DON McCORMACK
Richmond Unified School District may run some schools the year round.
From comments made at a recent school board meeting, three elementary schools would pioneer the change. These schools would be located in the south, middle and north of the district, which stretches from El Cerrito to Hercules.
No vote, however, has been taken. Trustees want more information before they decide the question in January.
But board President Katherine Lord said she strongly favors year-round schools. Trustee Don Lau praised the idea and trustee Eddis Harrison and Frank Calton, although wary, seemed willing to embrace the change if problems can be worked out and if parents support year-round education.
Only trustee Goy Fuller, who is retiring in next week, opposed the idea.
"I see neither the necessity nor the desirability of the public request for it," he declared.
Referring to a 1981 survey that he said indicated little public interest in year-round education, Fuller continued, "I don't think we should be trying to shove this down people's throats."
He said children need time away from school, time to "get away from their burdens."
Lord, after the meeting, responded that with year-round schooling students moved at a faster pace and needed less time for review. She said the system makes more efficient use of schools and improves teacher morale.
The 1981 survey was inconclusive, she said. (Parents were asked if they favored changes. Many did, but year-round schools placed about third in their choices.)
Although many school districts run schools year-round, only one district in Contra Costa does, San Ramon, said Robert George, director of administrative services and research for the Richmond Unified.
George, in a presentation, described several ways of setting up a year-round program. These included:
• Four terms of about 12 weeks each. Students are divided into four equal groups and attend three of the four quarters. They choose which quarter they will stay out. Teachers have the same option and would be paid extra if they worked the fourth quarter.
• Consecutive quarters. All students attend school for 48 weeks, four quarters. The four weeks of vacation are spread through the year and would include traditional holidays.
• Trimesters. The school year is divided into three terms. Students would attend two of the terms.
• Continuous education. Pupils complete one grade in 180 days, the average school year, and spend 24 to 45 days working on the next grade. By the time they complete the sixth grade, they will have picked up a full year. This plan would advance the school year to 204 to 225 days.
Other options include, five blocks of 45 days, one block optional; an expanded summer school; and an 11-month plan that reorganizes secondary schools and gives students more discretion to move at their own pace.
Lord said she favors the "45-15" plan, a variation of four-term approach. The year is divided in four blocks each consisting of 45 days of school and 15 days vacation. Students would have to attend all four sessions — a total of 180 school days.
Regular holidays and traditional vacations would make up the rest of the time off.
Lord says she favors the "45-15" because of its continuity, which would eliminate or reduce review time. (Normally, teachers spend a month to six weeks in the fall reviewing material from the previous year.)
George, citing studies, said school districts generally employ year-round schools to ease crowding.
Richmond Unified has lost students steadily for about 15 years but parts of the district, notably Hercules, are growing. Several elementary schools in the Richmond flatlands (among them, Grant and Belding) are also crowded, Lord said.
Several board members said these would be likely areas to establish the schools. If the board approves year-round schools, meetings will be held in the neighborhoods to get the opinions of parents.
"We certainly could not locate a school where people hated it," Lord said.
Again citing studies, George said many showed no educational advantage between traditional and the year-round approach. He said costs have gone up slightly in some districts but many have saved up to 8 percent.
"Parents believed (year-round schooling) helped to improve school programs, lower juvenile crime and provide migrants with a better education," he continued.
"Surveys showed parents' attitudes had gotten progressively more positive over the first five years of operation," George said.
Lord contested the educational standoff, contending that year-round schools particularly help the disadvantaged student. She said teachers like the "45-15" approach because the breaks give them time to revive.

Anti-nuke petitioners want vote

By EILEEN WALSH

ALBANY—If anti-nuclear activist Joe Kempkes can collect 900 signatures, Albany voters will have a chance in April to decide if they want to declare the city a nuclear-free zone.

Kempkes and the eight to 10 other Albany residents who make up the core of "Citizens for Nuclear Free Albany" are set this week to launch a door-to-door campaign in the city to seek signatures on a petition for an ordinance that will, among other things, force the city to divest itself of investments in companies that design, research or construct nuclear weapons; ban radioactive materials from the city; and forbid the city from investing in civil defense against nuclear war.

Kempkes said he is confident that he will get the signatures, though he is not as certain that the ordinance ultimately will pass. But, he says, it doesn't matter.

"I don't know if the voters will approve it," he said. "For me, the main thing is outreach, talking to people. If it passes, O.K.; if not, a lot was done."

What the group wants to do, in addition to passing the ordinance, is raise the consciousness of Albany citizens about the horrors of nuclear war, and establish a dialogue with groups that support nuclear arms. To that end, it holds a candlelight vigil every Sunday at 5 p.m. in the mini-park next to Say Cheese, and sponsors films, slide shows and programs that focus on nuclear issues.

But the main focus now is on the petition, and Kempkes said canvassers will go to every home in the city except those that request no solicitors. "We plan to shoot for 51 percent of the voters to sign the petition, not just 900," he said. "That would be about 4,500 signatures. The Alameda County Registrar of Voters said that 74 percent of Albany voters approved the nuclear freeze measure on the California ballot, so we think that's something to go by."

The group presented an early draft of the ordinance at a City Council meeting in August, but the members declined to endorse it, saying it was an issue between the voters and the petitioners.

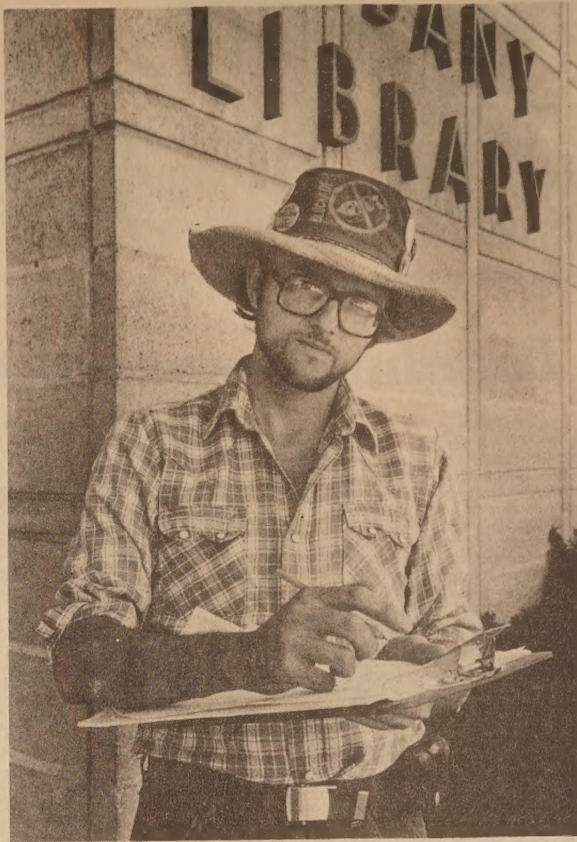

At that meeting, a number of objections were raised to the proposed ordinance, including the fact that the city could not control travel of radioactive materials on Interstate 80. Other problems with the proposed ordinance involved whether the city could identify companies that did nuclear arms work, and whether withdrawing from certain investment funds would hurt the city's income.

Kempkes' group revised the ordinance, and the final draft excludes 1-80 from the provision. Kempkes also said he reviewed the city's investment portfolio and found that only 5 percent of the stocks are in nuclear weapons-related companies.

Among the other provisions of the final draft are a ban on any activities related to nuclear war within the city limits, and an instruction to the city to publicly declare Albany a nuclear-free zone and to request the Soviet Union to remove the city from its nuclear weapons target list. The city also would be required to adopt a sister city of comparable size in the Soviet Union and ask the U.S. government to remove that city from its target list.

The city's "Welcome to Albany" sign would be amended to read "Nuclear Free Zone," and violations of any nuclear-free zone provisions would be punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.

The most important provision, Kempkes said, is the financial divestiture. "That's the thing that addresses support for nuclear industries. Money is what governments and corporations understand. Our ordinance sets a precedent nation-wide that we won't invest in nuclear arms. We think it sets a trend for the future."

Joe Kempkes is heading a petition drive

Citizens for Nuclear Free Albany is composed of Albany residents, Kempkes said. The group is an informal organization, and most of its costs so far have been borne by personal donations.

"I don't want it to go outside the city, basically," he said. "I don't want it to get too complicated." If they're successful with the petition, they may consider running candidates in the April election, he said.

Whether they're successful or not, the campaign will have been worthwhile, he said. "It's the attitudes we're interested in. The need for nuclear weapons is the question that needs to be addressed. While weapons are available for use, there's the danger that they will be used. We must address that, but in the meantime we work on people's attitudes."

Elders' group looks toward center growth

By CHARLES PELTON

EL CERRITO—Five days after The Open House, El Cerrito's senior center, celebrates its fifth anniversary, ground will be broken on an extension which will nearly double its size.

At its monthly meeting, the El Cerrito Committee on Aging discussed reviving a monthly senior newsletter and the progress of plans for the construction of a new 63-unit senior housing project on San Pablo Avenue.

Katie Lewis, supervisor of senior services, told the committee that approval by the Contra Costa County planning department, on Oct. 26, was the last obstacle to construction at the senior center.

Construction crews are set to begin work Nov. 7. A $268,000 bid from Elmer-Dinga Construction was accepted by the El Cerrito City Council.

The city received a $300,000 grant from the Federal Jobs Program through the Department of Housing and Urban Development to expand the center. However, money to furnish the project is not included. According to Lewis, council member Margaret Collins is spearheading a campaign to raise $20,000 to outfit the extension.

The Committee on Aging also received a $2,000 grant from the Gannett Foundation earmarked for a monthly seniors newsletter. Such a newsletter was produced with city funds and mailed by the committee from 1974 to 1982. But an $1,800 line item in the city's budget for the newsletter was deleted at that time.

"We are trying to figure out how to restate the newsletter," Lewis said. A tentative editorial group of four committee members was chosen to launch the program, but there is no target date for publication.

The newsletter will be mailed under the auspices of the El Cerrito Municipal Services Corporation, an agency which the city founded in January to mail newsletters and recreation brochures at low, non-profit mailing rates. The publication will offer a calendar of events, as well as local senior news.

However, one provision of the non-profit's charter stipulates that "no substantial portion" of the material mailed under MSC auspices should be intended to influence legislation or a political campaign.

"I will not accept that we are forbidden to deal with controversial matters," said committee member Arthur Schroeder, who will serve on the editorial committee.

Committee members expressed concern that the proposed 63-unit senior housing project, approved a few weeks ago, would be too spartan. One member called the whole project "a barebones situation," others wanted to find more add more windows and some balconies.

According to Jean Smith, the director of community development, much additional money might come from some of the funds already reserved by the Department of Housing Urban Development.

"If the city finds alternative sources," she said, "it's possible to make contributions to the appearance of the building (to improve) the amenities."

The building will be constructed on city-owned property on San Pablo Avenue between Jefferson and Madison. It is built, owned and managed by El Cerrito Health Corporation, a Sacramento-based company which has 12 similar projects around northern California.

Mayor Jean Siri said, "we have a way to educate a management that seem to need local input. Mind you, I'm lucky to find a sponsoring organization (the project)."

"We have to think about the future of the city is putting up," committee member Gertrude Hall said, referring to the use of the land upon which the project will be built. The land was granted by the development agency.

Smith said a community advisory committee has been appointed to provide input throughout the planning of the project. It has seven members, four appointed by the city and three El Cerrito residents. Construction on the building, which is named Theodore Roosevelt Manor, will not begin until next year.

In other business, the committee decided that El Cerrito's HomeShare program will be merged with a larger, county-wide shared housing organization, the HomeShare Alliance, based in El Sobrante and Alameda.

Lewis said that expanding the program to people who want to share a home seemed to make sense. Senior volunteers know of only two successful placements during the one-year lifetime of the HomeShare program.

Two new city council-approved committee members were introduced: Leavitt and Beatrice Schiffman. Leavitt, who had attended many prior meetings, is an informal basis, is the director of the activities at Christ Lutheran church in El Cerrito and at Saint James Lutheran Church in the Richmond Annex.

Schiffman, who recently retired as a field representative with the National Council on Aging, also serves on the services section of a committee on problems on aging of the State of California, the consumer advisory panel of the Telephone and the program committee of Self-Help for The Elderly in San Francisco.

Cop retrieves woman's ring

EL CERRITO—An undercover police officer stepped into the middle of a deal last Wednesday and retrieved two women for allegedly trying to swindle a engagement ring from a 77-year-old woman.

Detective Robert Malm said he was in plainclothes the parking lot of Safeway market about 1:45 p.m. when he saw the elderly victim approached by two women.

The strangers told the victim they had just finished a large envelope filled with money.

She said they told her they thought it would be best to consult their attorney, but suggested since she was alone, they should cut her in on a share so long as she gave them something of value to show her good faith.

She turned over her engagement ring, and as her attention was diverted, the two drove away with both cash and her ring.

But Malm stopped the suspects a little more than a block away.

Booked for the execution of an alleged pigeon scheme, one of the oldest scams around, were Laura Ann and also known as Diane Jackson, 35, and Barbara J. Byrne, 38. Both are from Oakland.

Rape suspect found

Albany police have arrested a suspect in the rape of a woman earlier this month.

Berkeley police say a second woman has accused suspect of being the man who raped and robbed her on March near Aquatic Park. He has also been charged with incest.

The man, 37-year-old Donald Wayne Lajiness, was arrested by Albany police last week. He is being held in the Santa Rita jail in lieu of $100,000 bail.

He has been charged with several felonies, including rape, rape by force and assault with a deadly weapon.

Police say Lajiness held the woman hostage in a motel area of Albany between 5:30 and 7:10 p.m. last week, raping her and threatening her with a knife.

He has been charged with several felonies, including rape, rape by force and assault with a deadly weapon.

Berkeley police say a 25-year-old woman identified Lajiness as the man who picked her up in Berkeley on Oct. 27, drove her to the foot of Addison Street and, brandishing a knife, forced her to commit sex acts and robbed her of $65.

RUSD census: enrollment dip

By BARBARA ERICKSON

A baby "boomlet" in kindergarten and first grade slowed the enrollment decline in Richmond Unified schools this year, according to the official census, but the number of junior high and high school students continued to drop.

Overall, the district lost only 181 students—for a total of 27,530 this year compared to 27,711 last year. The statistics are based on figures for Sept. 30, when enrollment peaks in most schools.

Like most districts in the state, Richmond Unified has steadily lost population since the mid-1960s, when the schools had more than 40,000 students.

All but two Richmond Unified secondary schools lost enrollment this year for a total decrease at the junior and senior high level of 275. Two secondary grade levels gained in numbers—9th grade, up by 102, and 11th, up by 57.

The elementary population showed gains at four grade levels with the largest increase in kindergarten, up 65, and first grade, up 195. Third and fourth grades grew by 43 and eight, respectively.

Other grade levels showed a loss, for a total of 94 at the elementary level. With gains in special education students—counted separately—the overall decline comes to 181.

Most elementary schools grew this year, mainly because the district closed five sites in June as an economy measure.

Dover, Ellershorst, Harding, Kensington, Seaview and Washington were the only sites to lose students. The biggest loser was Dover, down 99 students to 517. Harding and Washington lost 41 and 42, respectively.

Three basic schools, newly formed this year, were the top gainers in elementary sites. Sheldon's population jumped this fall by 110 for a total of 234. Ford went up 80 to 343, and Mira Vista gained 76 to 435.

Sheldon was spared from being shut down last year on a special provision. If it could attract at least 200 students during the spring enrollment period for basic schools, it would remain open. Sheldon exceeded the quota by 34.

The fourth basic school, Stewart grew by 32 students to 260.

Among the secondary schools Richmond bucked the downward trend by gaining 75 students. Gompers, which fluctuates in population throughout the year, increased by 93 over this time last year.

Three secondary schools lost more than 60 each—Adams, 65; De Anza, 61; and El Cerrito, 66. Ells remain the smallest high school in the district with 893 students, a loss of 22 from the year before. The largest is Pinole Valley with 1,898.

In John Swett, enrollment at the end of September stood at 495 in John Swett High, 550 in Carquinez Middle School, 667 in Hillcrest Elementary, and 14 at Willow Continuation.

The district gained 12 students over the year before, almost entirely in special education population. One year ago Swett had 53 students in special day classes. This year the census stands at 64.

We don't approve of a two-heart jump over a mere five-card ace. We use pre-emptive overcalls, but want distribution values. Jacoby, when 28-year-old, Jacoby invented that back in 1931, we must admit that he bid them with the same reckless abandon that 28-year-old Howard Parker does in 1983.

Anyway, his bid put considerable pressure on the ace. East South passed, West decided to light, bounding double led his three of trump. Howard let it ride, seven and promptly spade. If West had spade, Howard would have with his king, straggled and probably made the contract. West rose to jack. West led a low ace after a mental review of the bidding. Howard didn't bid that West didn't hold spades to the A-Q. He with dummy's king, drove the queen and made an trick and a top score.

Down Syndrome aid offered to parents

Learning the new baby has Down Syndrome can be devastating news for new parents. And raising that child, who will face developmental and medical problems throughout life, is certainly not an easy task.

To meet the special needs of these children and their families, a Down Syndrome Clinic has been implemented at Children's Hospital Medical Center through its Child Development Center. It is the only clinic of its kind in northern California.

A common cause of mental retardation, Down Syndrome occurs about once in every 600 births. Children with Down Syndrome have an increased incidence of medical disorders of certain types. In addition, they may display common psychological characteristics.

The focus of the clinic is to monitor and intervene at critical times in the life of the Down Syndrome child and adolescent. Medical services coordinated through the clinic include audiology, ophthalmology, neurology, dental, endocrinology, cardiology and orthopedics.

Family support is an important part of the clinic services. Staff members work closely with parents to help them manage the complex issues of care, as well as dealing with family stress, effects on siblings, advocacy for the Down Syndrome child and anticipatory guidance.

Educational services include infant programs, through the Parent-Infant Project at Children's Hospital, psychological testing and school planning. Nutritional services for obesity and failure to thrive are also included in the program.

The clinic is held every Friday morning, from 9 a.m. to noon. Frequency of visits is individualized. However, for a child under three years of age, a biannual visit is recommended. Medical issues can be coordinated through a family's local physician.

For more information, call the Child Development Center at 428-3351.

Jewish museum seeks docent trainees

The Judah L. Magnes Museum is now accepting applications for its 1984 docent training program.

A docent is a volunteer trained to conduct tours and help museum visitors understand and enjoy works in the museum collection.

Docents are trained to create and conduct special programs for elementary and secondary school students as well as public tours for senior citizens, corporate, professional, and other special interest groups.

The Magnes Museum is interested in individuals who have the ability to communicate effectively with groups and who want to learn about Jewish art, history and culture. A commitment of one year is expected after completion of training.

The winter semester will run from Jan. 8 through March 25 on Sundays from 10:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. There is a fee of $60 for docent trainees.

The deadline for applications is Nov. 30. For application forms and further information, call the museum at 849-2710 or write to 2911 Russell Street, Berkeley, 94705.

The instructor, Kenn Chase, has an M.A. in philosophy, and is co-founder and director of the Light Heart cardiac rehabilitation program in Napa.

He is currently teaching stress management and Tai Chi Ch'uan at UC-Berkeley, and at the El Cerrito Community Center.

The six-week session is on Tuesdays from 8:30-9:30 a.m. Cost is $22 for residents and $25 for non-residents.
